Project – Site Plan

1. Site Name:

Walking with Purpose

Beyond the Veil: Temples, Family History, and Eternal Families

The name Walking with Purpose was selected because it reflects the journey of discipleship and progression along the covenant path. It emphasizes intentional spiritual growth, lifelong learning, temple preparation, and the importance of making and keeping sacred covenants.

The subtitle, Beyond the Veil: Temples, Family History, and Eternal Families, highlights the educational focus of the project on temple worship, family history work, vicarious ordinances, and the eternal nature of family relationships.

Together, the title and subtitle communicate the central purpose of the website: helping visitors better understand how the covenant path, temple ordinances, family history work, and eternal families are interconnected within God's plan.

2. Site Purpose

Walking with Purpose is an educational website designed to help users understand how the covenant path, temple ordinances, family history work, and eternal families work together within God's plan.

The website will allow visitors to:

- Learn about the covenant path and its role in spiritual progression.
- Understand the purpose and importance of temples.
- Explore introductory information about temples around the world.
- Discover how family history supports temple work and vicarious ordinances.
- Learn how to begin family history research using FamilySearch.
- Access official Church and FamilySearch resources for continued learning.

This project is being developed for academic purposes as part of the WDD 231 course and is inspired by both personal interest and practical experience in temple and family history work. As a temple worker and Temple and Family History leader, I have witnessed how temple worship and family history research work together to strengthen faith, connect generations, and help individuals progress along the covenant path.

My greatest desire with this project is to invite people to draw closer to Jesus Christ so they may come to know Him personally. Truly knowing the Savior inspires individuals to fulfill the requirements for exaltation out of love rather than obligation. (John 17:3) Through sacred ordinances, His power is manifested in our lives. When we participate in these ordinances with purpose and sincere intent, through His grace we will witness the blessings of salvation and the path that leads to eternal life.

The project also seeks to help visitors gain a deeper understanding of the relationship between temples, family history work, sacred ordinances, and eternal families while encouraging continued learning through official Church resources.

Walking with Purpose is intended to provide an educational and introductory learning experience. It does not replace, replicate, or represent official resources of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints or FamilySearch. Visitors are encouraged to continue their learning through the official resources available at ChurchofJesusChrist.org and FamilySearch.org.

Important Notice

This website is an educational project created for academic and learning purposes. It is not intended to replace, replicate, or officially represent The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, FamilySearch, or any affiliated organization.

All official, doctrinal, administrative, or updated information will be obtained from, referenced through, or linked to official Church and FamilySearch resources.

The purpose of this project is educational and informational. Through this website, I hope to inspire greater interest in temples, family history work, sacred ordinances, the eternal blessings associated with them, as well as encourage individuals to come unto Christ and learn about His Plan of Salvation.

3. Scenarios

Scenario 1

I am a new member of the Church. After baptism and confirmation, what are the next ordinances on the covenant path, and how do they relate to the temple?

Scenario 2

I have heard about family history work, but I do not understand why it is important for temple worship. What is the connection between family history and temple ordinances?

Scenario 3

What temples are located in my region, and how do they support members in making and keeping sacred covenants?

Scenario 4

I would like to begin my family history journey. What are the first steps to using FamilySearch and preparing names for temple ordinances?

Scenario 5

I am preparing to attend the temple. What resources can help me better understand temple worship, covenants, and spiritual preparation?

Scenario 6

I would like to help my ancestors receive temple ordinances. How can family history research help identify relatives who may need sacred ordinances performed on their behalf?

4. Color Scheme

For this project, I have determined my color palette as follows:

4.1. Temple Blue / Color: #1E3A5F

Where will it be used?

- Main header
- Navigation menu
- Main headings
- Footer
- Secondary buttons

4.2. Inspiration Gold / Color: #D4AF37

Where will it be used?

- Primary buttons
- Featured elements
- Icons
- Important links
- Visual accents

4.3. White / Color: #FFFFFF

Where will it be used?

- Main background
- Reading areas
- Forms

4.4. Light Gray / Color: #F5F7FA

Where will it be used?

- Cards
- Alternate backgrounds
- Informational sections

Color Scheme

Temple Blue - #1E3A5F

Inspiration Gold - #D4AF37

White - #FFFFFF

Light Gray - #F5F7FA

5. Color Schema Use in Document

Color	Temple Blue	Inspiration Gold	White	Platinum	Graphite
Hex Code	1E3A5F Oxford Navy	D4AF37 Metallic Gold	FFFFFF White	F5F7FA Platinum	2C2C2C Graphite
Purpose	Header, navigation, headings, footer	Primary buttons, highlights, icons	Main backgrounds, forms, reading areas	Cards, alternate sections	Body text and labels

Temple Blue will serve as the primary branding color for navigation, headings, and footer elements. Inspiration Gold will be used for call-to-action buttons and featured content.

Graphite will provide high readability for body text, while White and Platinum will create a clean and accessible reading experience.

Rule in CSS

```

6. Typography

Merriweather

Usage:

- Main headings (H1)
- Section headings (H2)
- Subheadings (H3)

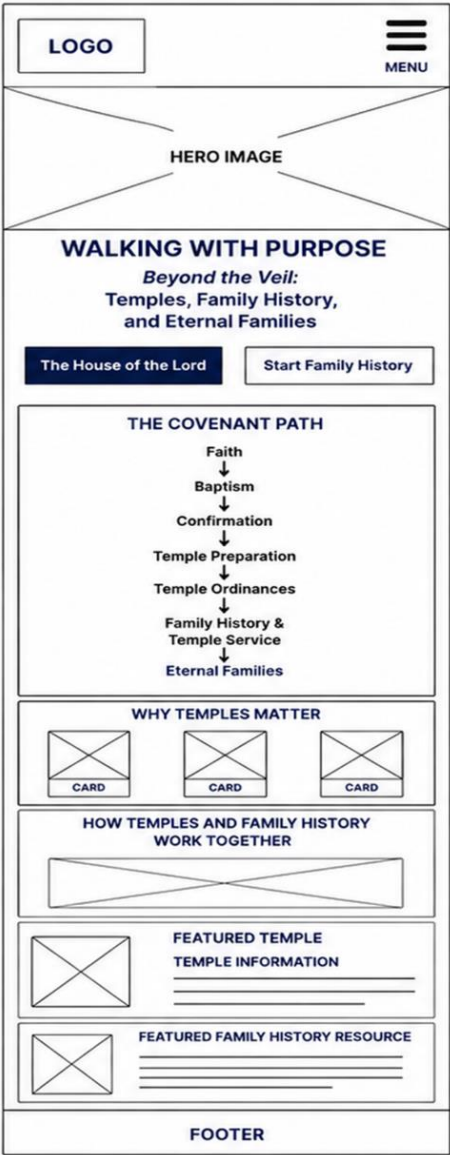

Open Sans

Usage:

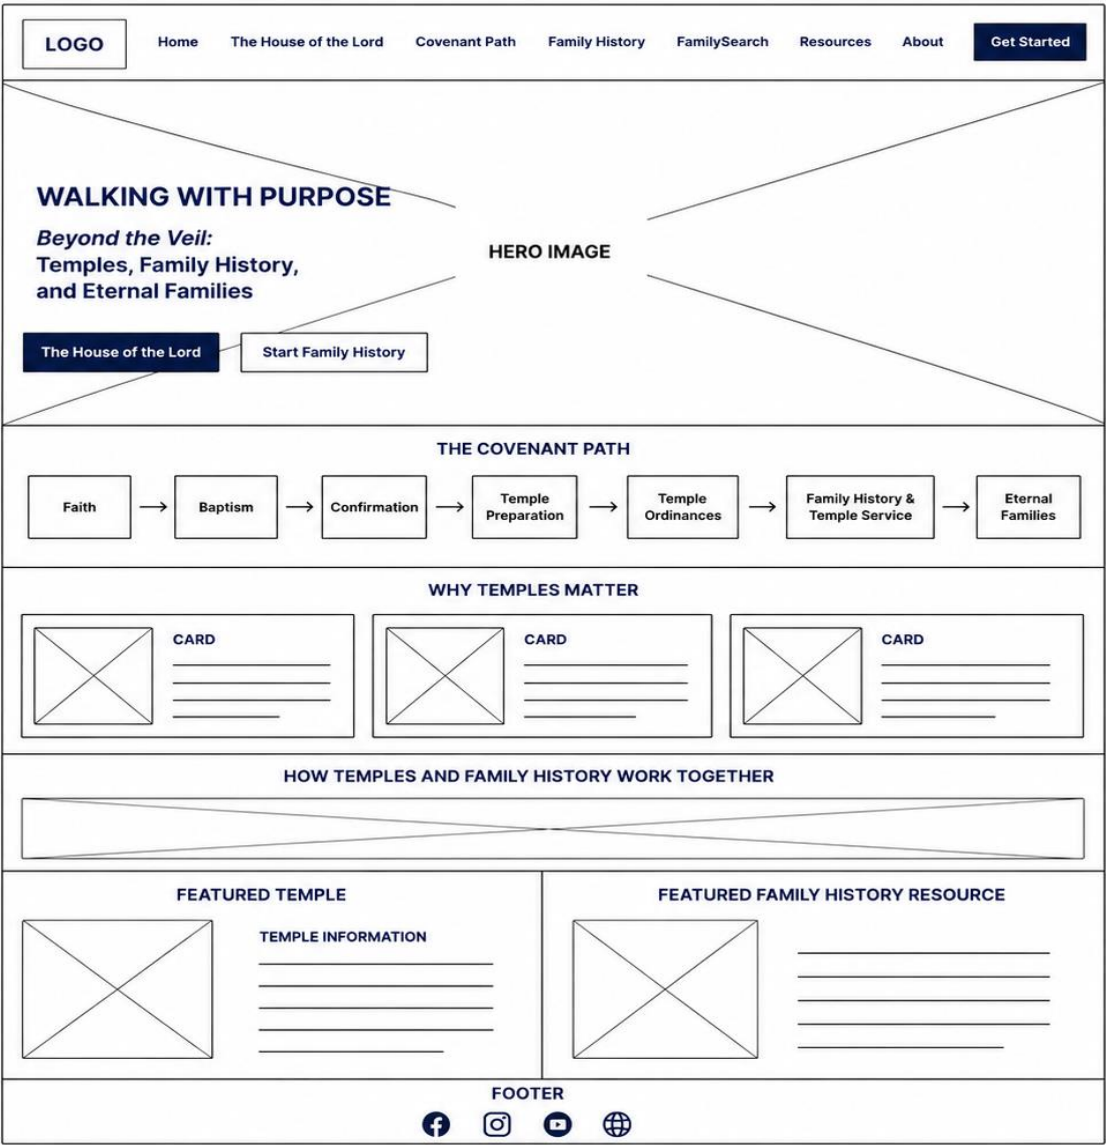

- Body text
- Paragraphs
- Lists
- Forms
- Navigation

7. Wireframes

7.1. Mobile Wireframe

7.2 Desktop Wireframe

8. Valid HTML and CSS

This website will be developed using valid HTML5 and CSS3 standards to ensure compatibility, accessibility, maintainability, and a positive user experience across different devices and browsers.

The site plan document and the final website will include proper HTML structure, semantic elements, and a meaningful page title. Semantic HTML elements such as the following will be used whenever appropriate:

- <header>
- <nav>
- <main>
- <section>
- <article>
- <footer>

CSS will be organized using a mobile-first approach and responsive design principles to support mobile, tablet, and desktop devices.

The project will be evaluated using:

- W3C HTML Validator
- W3C CSS Validator
- Lighthouse
- Accessibility testing tools

Special attention will be given to:

- Proper heading hierarchy
- Alternative text for images
- Keyboard navigation
- Accessible color contrast
- Responsive layouts
- Performance optimization
- Search engine optimization (SEO)

Performance Optimization

To improve loading speed and overall user experience, the website will follow performance best practices learned throughout the course.

These practices include:

- Optimized images in WebP format whenever possible.
- Responsive images sized appropriately for different devices.
- Lazy loading for non-critical images.
- Minimized and organized CSS and JavaScript files.
- Efficient use of local JSON data.
- Reduced unnecessary HTTP requests.
- Meaningful file names and optimized asset management.

Whenever possible, individual images will be smaller than approximately 150 KB, and larger main images will be optimized to balance image quality and performance.

The overall website design will focus, as has been the case in the weekly course exercises, on performance to achieve high Lighthouse scores and provide a fast and smooth experience on both desktop and mobile devices.

The goal is to create a website that meets modern web development standards, striving for excellent results in performance, accessibility, best practices, and SEO.

Data Sources and Dynamic Content

The website will primarily use local JSON files to store and organize temple information, family history resources, educational content, and other supporting data. This approach provides stability, reliability, and efficient content management while allowing dynamic rendering through JavaScript and the Fetch API.

To further demonstrate modern web development techniques learned throughout the WDD 231 course, the project may also incorporate external APIs to enrich the user experience. These services may be used to provide dynamic information relevant to the content presented on the website.

For example, weather data may be displayed for selected temple locations using a weather API similar to those utilized during course activities. Additional APIs may be considered if they enhance the educational experience and support the objectives of the project.

The website will also include direct references to official resources from The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and FamilySearch. Educational information, selected images, links, historical references, and publicly available content from official Church and FamilySearch resources may be incorporated throughout the website to support learning and provide users with reliable sources for continued study.

Whenever appropriate, visitors will be encouraged to access official Church and FamilySearch resources for current, authoritative, and detailed information regarding temples, family history work, sacred ordinances, and related topics.

The combination of local JSON datasets, Fetch API requests, dynamic content rendering, selected external data sources, and official Church resources will help demonstrate the application of core web development concepts while maintaining a reliable, educational, and user-friendly experience.

Site Structure

Home Page

Introduces the covenant path, temple worship, family history work, and eternal families. The page provides an overview of the project's purpose, featured content, and educational resources that help visitors understand how these principles work together.

The House of the Lord

An interactive educational experience featuring temple information, search and filtering tools, temple facts, historical background, and dynamic content designed to help users better understand the role of temples, sacred ordinances, and covenant-making in God's plan.

Family History

An educational guide explaining the purpose of family history work, its connection to temple ordinances, and practical steps for beginning family history research using FamilySearch.

Resources

A curated collection of official Church resources, FamilySearch materials, articles, guides, and educational content that support continued learning about temples, family history, and the covenant path.

About

Provides information about the project, its educational purpose, academic context, acknowledgments, disclaimer, and the inspiration behind its development.

Project Statement

Temple & Family History Explorer was inspired by the author's personal interest in temples, family history, and vicarious ordinances.

The project seeks to explain in a simple and engaging way how the covenant path leads to temple ordinances and how family history work helps extend those blessings to past generations.

This website has been developed exclusively for academic purposes as part of the WDD 231 course and does not constitute an official source of information for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Project Scope Refinement

The original project proposal was titled “Temple and Family History Explorer” and focused on information about the temple, family history work, vicarious ordinances, and educational resources related to temple service and family history.

As the planning process progressed, the project scope was refined and expanded to better reflect the relationship between the covenant path, temple ordinances, family history work, and eternal families. This refinement does not represent a change of theme, but rather a more complete and organized presentation of the same concepts identified in the original proposal.

The project is not changing direction; the original idea has simply matured through additional planning, research, and analysis beyond the wireframe design. The updated title more accurately reflects the broader educational purpose already present in the initial proposal, including temple worship, family history work, sacred ordinances, temple service, and the eternal nature of family relationships. For this reason, the project title has been updated to:

WALKING WITH PURPOSE

Beyond the Veil: Temples, Family History, and Eternal Families

Please note that this title better communicates the full scope of the project while maintaining consistency with the goals, interests, and objectives outlined in the original proposal. The central focus remains the educational relationship between temples, family history, sacred ordinances, the covenant path, coming unto Christ, and learning more about His Plan of Salvation.
